Great rug-art book, with minor kvetches. 4.6 stars By Peter D. Tillman First, this is an outstanding rug-art book. Published by Hali magazine, it features state-of the art- (for 1998) color printing, with a number of full-bleed color pages, generally details of the best, cleanest and brightest rugs. And the rugs are pretty much all first-rate choices. OK, now for the kvetches. First (and minor): the detail blow-ups usually aren't identified -- but a little detective work gets you to the full-rug page. Far more serious: the full-rug pages, or most of them, have smallish photos with lots of white space. And it's arbitrary: a nice big rug-photo next to a squinty little one. What were they thinking? Regardless, if you are a ruggie who likes Caucasian rugs, you need this book. 4.6 stars. Happy reading -- and salivating Peter D. Tillman

Caucasian prayer rugs are generally small weavings with a directional motif, usually in the form of an arch or "mihrab", which is intended to point the faithful towards Mecca. One of the most popular types of carpets among collectors, they are prized for their highly sophisticated weaving technique, their rich colours and their stylized geometric designs. Taking an aesthetic approach to the study of these rugs, this book also places them in their historical context, and includes an essay by Jim Dixon which addresses the fundamental issue of the meaning of the designs to those who made and used the carpets.
