Inspector George Mason of Scotland Yard Special Branch, together with his able assistant Detective Sergeant Alison

Aubrey, are charged with identifying the person behind a series of attacks on finance industry personnel. The perpetrator, supremely confident of himself, leaves a cryptic quotation at each scene, on his lethal progress through major European cities. Will the detectives discover their significance in time to prevent the next victim being targeted?

About the Author I was born and raised in northern England, completing my education at London University, graduating cum laude. In my subsequent career as a schoolteacher, I lived and worked in several European countries, learning foreign languages in the process. I use this experience to provide authentic, first-hand background for my series of Inspector Mason mystery novels, with original plots and interesting characters. In 2000, I moved permanently to the USA with my American wife Catharine and our three children. My other interests besides writing are year-round outdoor pursuits, music and travel.
