Bob Johnson : San Jose (Postcard History) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised San Jose (Postcard History):

I was able to see many places that I remember my dad referring to. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. A Sentimental Journey By Don Campton This is a great little book that documents some of the classic buildings and architecture of San Jose prior to WWII. Unfortunately, most of those buildings were destroyed by fire, the April 1906 earthquake, or were demolished in the name of "progress" and urban development. All current and former residents of San Jose would enjoy this book, almost like watching a sentimental, tear jerker movie. It is so sad to see what we have lost from yesteryear. But through Bob Johnson's fine little book, we can all cherish those great buildings and places of the past via his postcard history.

Founded by the Spanish in 1777 to provide food for the military settlements in Monterey and San Francisco, San Jose is the oldest civilian settlement in California. After independence from Mexico, San Jose became the county seat of Santa Clara County and the first state capital. For many years, San Jose was the center of a rich farming community whose vistas of blooming orchards prompted the nickname "Valley of Heart's Delight." Following World War II, a massive transformation took place in the landscape and culture of San Jose and the surrounding area. Fields and orchards gave way to subdivisions, malls, freeways, and office buildings. The population grew from less than 100,000 to over a million as agriculture was supplanted by semiconductors and software development.

About the Author Bob Johnson has assembled a collection of historic postcards to portray San Jose in the years before the transformation from agriculture to high technology. Bob is a retired local history librarian and coauthor of the Arcadia publication San Jose's Historic Downtown.
